Biography

James Marshall is a seasoned litigation attorney who represents businesses and individuals across a wide range of civil matters, with a primary focus on defending claims involving construction accidents, premises liability, and general liability. His practice also spans commercial litigation, employment discrimination, legal malpractice, long-term care, medical malpractice, and cybersecurity matters.

James has a proven track record of successfully handling complex, high-exposure cases on behalf of clients ranging from major healthcare institutions to multibillion-dollar public companies. He is experienced in managing multijurisdictional litigation, coordinating national defense strategies, and supervising local counsel to ensure consistent and effective case management across jurisdictions.

James brings significant prior experience from his time as a partner at an AMLAW 200 firm, where he served as primary defense counsel for a leading real estate investment trust. In that role, he handled litigation nationwide involving premises liability, long-term care, construction accidents, and other high stakes matters, developing strategic approaches to complex claims and providing comprehensive defense across multiple jurisdictions.
